Protecting desktops is tough.

For a long time it has been a weak link in the chain of IT security for business.

Any software can start to malfunction. But with antivirus, that can be very expensive

So we make it a strong link.
PC Desktop Security goes way beyond traditional antivirus protection.

And then we go farther.
We add a complete set of security services.

PC Desktop Security, installed on PCs, exceeds traditional antivirus protection with:

Monitored anti-virus. Powered by Sophos.

This is the foundation.
Many virus problems occur in companies when one workstation does not receive anti-virus updates. It can be caused by a software problem on the workstation, or perhaps it was turned off. By monitoring your anti-virus, we can take action to repair your computer, or alert you to do it.

Website Filtering

Web scams are increasing. Sites can appear to be legitimate (or questionable, such as a pornography or gambling site), but be designed to make you click on something that tells the site you are giving permission for the virus or scam.

Website Filtering blocks access to websites known to be risky, updated from a continually expanded list of such hazardous web sites.

It also works with the email protection to intercept phishing threats.

Email encryption

Data sent by email cannot be snooped, even if your password is stolen.
When sensitive data is sent by email, encryption prevents others reading your email. In fact, in its PCI standard, the credit card industry has moved to require email encryption for businesses that process credit card transactions and send any of this data by email.

Data Protections

A variety of other tools protect data on workstations or laptops, such as
- Encryption of data on the workstation,
- Tracking which users have accessed sensitive data,
- Block ability of devices (such as USB memory sticks) to remove data from a PC

In all cases, Zirius recommends remotely monitored/managed antivirus for its clients, and works with them to determine which other security features make sense for them.
